GOLF HOLIDAYS 2007-2008

WESTIN KIERLAND GOLF COURSE SCOTTSDALE, ARIZONA

Located just off Scottsdale road adjacent to the Westin Kierland Hotel, you will find a remarkable desert golf course well within the city limits of Scottsdale.

Designed by Scott Miller, formerly a senior designer for Jack Nicklaus, Kierland Golf Club provides three 18-hole combinations from which to choose. Named after indigenous plant life found on the course, Acacia, Ironwood and Mesquite offer a complementary collection of nines – each with its own flavour and strategy. Surrounded by sweeping vistas of Camelback Mountain, Pinnacle Peak, and the McDowell Mountains, the course is punctuated by the expansive and dramatic beauty of the Arizona desert.

The park-like setting of hills and valleys have 27 holes of emerald green fairways and golden coloured desert grasses while sweeping over constantly changing elevations to spacious bermuda grass greens. More than three hundred bunkers guard the way, along with lakes, dry desert washes and stands of desert trees.

The three nines are all of a very high standard and each can play to 3500 yards from the championship tees. Not quite as long as it sounds, since the fairways are firm and provide plenty of roll. The club has some unique features, such as climate friendly air conditioning on the golf carts (a block of ice is contained within a cooler, vented by a fan through a tube to the golfers head—clever!!), as well as a rolling, covered roof on the driving range. Golf here is playable year round and there is no annual overseeding on the fairways, as they utilise a new type of perennial grass.

Featuring an 1800 square foot golf shop, locker room facilities, and the Brittlebush Bar & Grill, the 19,000 square foot clubhouse offers upscale shopping and dining for the most discerning golfer. The Westin Kierland Golf Experience brings together a perfectly manicured 27 holes of championship golf, the best exercise physiology, top golf instruction, on-site golf equipment fitting and the latest in golf technology all at one location.
